Water well.
Allow water to drain through the pot and make sure the water stays below the top of the bulb.
Place the pot in a sunny spot.
Water sparingly until a flower spike appears.
Soil should be moist but never soggy.
Keep the pot warm.
Amaryllis are touchy about cool breezes.
Put the pot in a draft-free spot.
Wait patiently.
Most amaryllis will bloom four to six weeks after planting.
Move flowers.
Once flowers start to open, indirect light is best.
Snip off flowers as they fade. Cut the stems about an inch from the base after all flowers have bloomed. Strappy leaves grow as the flowering period ends.
